Holmdahl, Mori on economy

Two local politicians who attended last week's White House Conference on Balanced National Growth and Economic Development think California should have a similar broadly-based seminar to discuss state economic issues.

Assemblyman Floyd Mori (D-Pleasanton) and Senator John Holmdahl (D-Castro Valley) were among 25 California delegates to the five-day conference that included approximately 500 persons representing industry, community groups and government in all 50 states.

The conference was designed to receive input from all levels of society on the direction Congress and the president should take to bolster the economy.

Both Holmdahl and Mori felt that the conference was beneficial because persons from different interests groups gained greater understanding of each other's problem areas through several days of discussion. But neither representative was overly optimistic that the gathering would have much impact, both choosing to wait and see what becomes of recommendations made to federal leaders.

Mori said the conference provided a "very positive statement of a lot of the problems" between different interests. Many delegates, he said, commented on the knowledge and understanding they received about other group's complaints.

But because the issues at hand were so broad, Mori said, it was difficult to get concrete proposals to forward to Congress.

Holmdahl said he had "an overall uneasiness" that delegates tended to accept the federal government as "the solver of all problems."

"There's not enough emphasis on how to encourage private employers to expand," he said, adding that this feeling of the government "spending more and expanding programs" to solve problems may be a sentiment of the general public as well.

Both men pushed for a similar conference on a statewide level for later this year or next spring, an idea proposed by the California delegation while in Washington. Mori said he would meet with Holmdahl and Lieutenant Governor Mervyn Dymally within a month to set up a state conference on the economy.

Meanwhile, Congress and the president will study a report prepared by conference delegates pointing up their feelings which direction the economy should take to pull itself out of the doldrums.

LLL search team

LLL scientists Rice Tolan, Ira Morrison, Richard Wagner, (inset) and Walt Nervick, told the media about searching for parts of the Russian satellite.

Canadian searchers back home

LIVERMORE — Four scientists who went looking for parts of that downed Russian spy satellite in Canada's Northwest Territory returned to Lawrence Livermore Laboratory yesterday and told their story of the search for radioactive debris.

Dr. Richard L. Wagner, leader of the expedition known as operation "Morning Light," said that five fragments from the Soviet satellite have been recovered so far in a 200 mile span between Great Slave Lake and Baker Lake. Wagner, who is the Lab's associate director for nuclear testing, said the pieces ranged in size from a four-foot strut to a fragment no bigger than a pin head. The largest piece was found accidentally by six National Geographic explorers with dog sleds.

The rest of the fragments were detected from planes flying 500 to 1,500 feet above the ground.

Wagner drew a rectangle on a map of the Northwest Territory and explained that this area was calculated to be the range where debris fell. He said that the team was told a couple weeks before the satellite's re-entry on Jan. 24, to be ready to conduct a search.

"The first evening we laid out impact areas and organized the search," Wagner said. "We used C-130 aircraft with sensitive detection equipment flying back and forth in a rib-cage pattern 30 miles wide and one mile apart."

The second phase according to Wagner, was "localizing" the area where radiation was detected and then "pinpointing it to the foot."

Phase III calls for a "fine grain search," he said, using helicopters to detect and pick up the pieces. "Then in a week or two," he said, "we will make a very thorough search in which the planes will fly rib-cage patterns one-quarter of a mile apart."

Currently, 19 scientists from the Lab are dispatched on the Canadian expedition and 120 searchers are there from the EG&G Corporation — a San Ramon based outfit that provides technical expertise for nuclear tests.

Wagner said that the Lab is going to start cycling more people there and back to maintain a 24 hour operation.

To date, the Canadian Minister of Defense estimates that clean-up operations have cost several million dollars. The Canadian government is hoping the search will be complete in a few months before the thaw flushes out the impact area which is 50 to 70 per cent water. "The verdict isn't in yet," Wagner said. "If one does find parts of substantial radiation, we believe it is possible to clean it up so the hazard is acceptable."

Developers are 'active,' they donate

MARTINEZ — Supervisor Eric Hasseltine expressed surprise about the uproar caused by his campaign finance report in which he stated he has $17,286 in his future campaign till.

Hasseltine is Contra Costa County's fifth district supervisor, which includes San Ramon. He will not be eligible for reelection until June 1980, he said. His current term ends in December 1980.

"I realize it looks curious to have that amount during an off year but I'm astounded people are concerned," he said. "We raised five times that amount between the primary and runoff elections and that didn't hit the front pages of the newspapers."

Supervisor Robert Schroder, Walnut Creek, reported he had $684 in leftover campaign funds in the campaign finance reports for the six-month period from last July to December.

The other three county supervisors, Warren Boggess of Concord, Nancy Fahden of Martinez and James Kenny of Richmond, each reported they had neither collected nor spent over $200 in the off-year period.

Hasseltine reported he collected $12,937 in the six-month period to add to $9,413 he had previously collected. His expenditures during the six-month period, July to December, amounted to $1,590.

Since he "thoroughly dislikes asking people for money," Hasseltine explained he took his campaign committee's advice and devised an ongoing "low-key" method to raise campaign funds instead of waiting for a last-minute pitch. They suggested forming the Hasseltine Breakfast Club last year which convenes every three months. A $100 a plate is charged at the club.

Hasseltine said this method has three advantages. One is that by the time a campaign rolls around, the money to fund it is available. Next, by having an ongoing collection, time isn't taken away from campaigning to raise money. Finally, it is easier to keep sources of donations spread over a broader base.

"This breakfast club is purely a convenient way for those who wish to support me to make their contributions."

Most of his future campaign income was derived from the breakfast club, he indicated.

Spoils from COVA

Congress of Valley Agency's accountant, Jim Walker, has notified the member agencies of approximately how much money they can expect to be returned from their fiscal sharing in the now - disbanded agency.

City of Livermore and Dublin San Ramon Services District each can expect something like $2,069. Pleasanton will get $1,446, Zone 7 has $1,034 coming and East Bay Regional Park District can expect $36.

The funds are based on the pro - rata shares contributed in dues and currently in the treasury.

Minor last - minute expenditures involved in totaling out the agency could drop the amounts slightly.

Santos Rd. again

Alameda County supervisors will consider abandonment of Santos Ranch Road at 10 a.m. today in their chambers at 1221 Oak St., Oakland.

It's the sixth time on the docket and the public hearing has been opened and closed twice on the controversial matter. The county is worried about legal liability on the steep road; landowners are divided about whether it should be abandoned and under what conditions.

School chief meeting

The last in a series of "in-put" meetings to discuss the impending search for a new Amador and Pleasanton schools superintendent will take place this evening at Alisal School in Pleasanton.

Hosted by board members of the two districts, the meeting is specifically for classified employees and begins at 8 o'clock in the Alisal multi-purpose room.

Red tape follows election

Why Komandorski still stands

DUBLIN — Voters overwhelmingly approved replacing 150 public housing units in Komandorski Village last May. Remember? The measure passed 3 to 1. Nine months later the old barrack type apartments built during World War II still stand.

The bureaucratic wheels of the federal government turn slowly.

To date, the Pleasanton Housing Authority, owner and manager of Komandorski, has Housing and Urban Development funds (HUD) for just 50 of the 150 units.

And that isn't money in the hand. Reams of legal paperwork are still being completed, with the target date for ground breaking moved back to February, 1979.

A month ago, the target date was January, 1978. Again, complicated paperwork is causing delay, according to director Michael Parsons.

With guaranteed funds for only one third of Komandorski apartments, and facing a state mandate to demolish all the units by 1979, the authority is searching for new money sources.

The authority has applied to the California Housing Finance Agency (CHFA) for funds to build 150 units, 50 units more than needed because Parsons believes CHFA will fund a small portion of all the units requested.

The authority will be lucky, he says, to get CHFA funding for 50 units. Even if "luck" holds out, it would still leave a third of the village orphaned and slated for demolition.

Yet extensions are as much a part of bureaucracy as demolition mandates, thus Parsons believes the state will grant dilapidated Komandorski Village a reprieve because, "I think we can show we're doing as much as we can on this."

So, it may be awhile before the "barracks across from Camp parks Parks are replaced with new apartments. And, to extend their aging life, the authority will soon begin weatherizing and insulating the buildings.

Funded by CETA, the weatherization project will also serve as job training for those between 16 and 21 who are not attending school.

The training program will last two months and workers will be paid $2.65 an hour. Once the project is completed, participants will be helped by a Job Development Unit in finding full-time work.

No work experience is necessary and those interested can contact the housing authority at 828-3132.

Chamber heads nix cityhood poll notion

DUBLIN — Dublin Chamber of Commerce directors nixed the idea of conducting an opinion poll among its 245 members to see if they do or do not favor incorporating Dublin.

Chamber directors made this decision last night during a regular board meeting.

Mary Stewart, chamber president, had proposed making the Poll. She was absent last night and Vice - president Tom Driver presided.

Pipeline

Bond sale goes forward

Word should be out soon whether the suit filed against the $28 million sewage export pipeline project Friday will force the project's bond interest rates up, increasing the cost to valley residents.

Yesterday, Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA) representatives met with a bond rating company in New York. A meeting with yet another bond rating company is scheduled for today.

The civil taxpayers' suit, filed Friday by Paul Tull, Thurman Caudill, John Fraga and David Eller, seeks an injunction against the sale of LAVWMA bonds and asks the court to halt pipeline design and construction work.

Yesterday Eller called Standard and Poor, one of the two bond rating companies with which LAVWMA is meeting, to warn the company of the court action. The meeting between the company and LAVWMA went on yesterday afternoon, but no representatives could be reached for comment by press time.

Meanwhile, LAVWMA project manager Bob Bradford said here he received a call yesterday from a Pleasanton resident who indicated several citizens might counter-sue Eller, Fraga, Tull and Caudill.

Bradford said he didn't advise the unidentified caller one way or another. LAVWMA financial consultants once estimated that CARD Committee actions against the pipeline could raise the interest rates, costing taxpayers $500,000 over the bonds' 20-year life.

Valley governments, officially served with a copy of the complaint yesterday, have 30 days in which to respond to the suit.

LAVWMA representatives are scheduled to return from New York tomorrow with some indication of the bond interest ratings. Although the four plaintiffs are related to the CARD Committee, CARD spokesperson Birdie Bianchi said their action was independent of the activist group which is also fighting the sewage export pipeline.

Man sought in attack

LIVERMORE — A 15-year-old girl walking along Railroad Avenue Saturday evening was forced at knifepoint to perform sex acts, police reported.

The girl told officers she was approached by a man about 8:45 p.m. who pulled a switchblade and forced her to walk with him to the east side of Granada Bowl where the attack occurred.

The suspect is described as a white man about 25 years old, between 5-foot-9 and 6-feet tall, weighing about 130 pounds, with brown curly hair, blue eyes and a gold ring with a yellow ornament on his right ring finger.

LIVERMORE — A 34-year-old Livermore man accused of beating his wife was arrested and booked on suspicion of battery early Saturday, police reported.

According to reports, the woman told police she had just brought her husband home from a hospital when he became angered and started hitting her. She ran from the home and called police.

Officers responded to the home where the woman signed a citizens' arrest form. The man told police to get out and a struggle ensued. The suspect was subdued, handcuffed and arrested.

Officers said the man resisted booking attempts and placed matresses and toilet paper over an observation camera in the city jail's holding cell. The suspect was booked on suspicion of battery.

LIVERMORE — A 15-year-old youth who allegedly struck a 12-year-old in the eye Friday night was arrested, police reported.

The youth told police he was walking on Leahy Way about 8 p.m. when the suspect approached and asked where a certain girl was located. When the youth denied knowing her whereabouts, the suspect struck the youth in the left eye.

Police located the suspect in an alley behind his house. The youth was arrested on suspicion of being drunk in public because he was reportedly banging his head against a fence, police said. An investigation into the battery complaint is continuing.

LIVERMORE — A 17-year-old youth told police he was struck repeatedly by another man in an Olivina Avenue residence Saturday evening.

The victim told officers he was arguing with the suspect when the man walked over and slugged him in the face. He tried to get up but was struck several times and finally left the house to call police.

A 20-year-old suspect is being sought for questioning.

LIVERMORE — The driver of a vehicle that allegedly spun out in view of a police officer and struck a parked car was arrested late Saturday, police reported.

Officer Mark Weiss reported seeing a vehicle spin out at Bluebell and Springtown streets. The vehicle reportedly drove away and spun out again at Marigold and Heather streets where it struck a parked car doing minor damage to both vehicles.

The driver was arrested on suspicion of drunk driving. Police found an 18-inch billy club under the driver's seat.

Booked on suspicion of drunk driving and possession of a dangerous weapon was Richard Douglas Brookshire, 25, of 1340 Hibiscus Way.

PLEASANTON — Burglars cut a hole in the rear door to an Arbor Drive residence Sunday and took several valuables, police reported.

Missing items include a television, silverware, and jewelry. There are no suspects.

Ira Morrison, one of LLL's scientists sent to the Northwest Territory, displays a T-shirt with the logo for operation "Morning Light." It depicts a Soviet hammer and sickle on a maple leaf.

Murray mulling member

DUBLIN — Murray School District trustees were still deliberating at press time over a candidate to replace Bob Foster.

Trustee aspirants included David Melander, Tom McCormack, Linda Cooley, Harry Molz, and John Bird. The appointee will serve through March, 1979.

The board learned earlier that enrollment projections show a continuing dip, to 4,597 in 1978-79, from a 1973 high of 5,901.

Business Manager Darrell Carter outlined the Jarvis - Gann initiative set for the June ballot. It would cut $3 million or 44 per cent of the Murray budget, Carter contends.

Carter said the slash in revenues would practically wipe out the vital parts of the 1978-79 budget. The Jarvis - Gann measure, if approved, would take effect July 1.

Canal debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Panama Canal treaty — one of the most politically-charged issues of the year — is ready for Senate debate this week, while the House considers President Carter's $32 billion welfare package.

Senate leaders say the canal proposal may reach the floor Wednesday or Thursday. But consideration of the controversial pact will not begin in earnest until after Congress returns Feb. 20 from its 10-day recess for Lincoln's Birthday.

Bipartisan efforts to work out guarantees for future U.S. rights of access and defense appear to have enhanced prospects for the treaty's Senate ratifiction, which would require a two-thirds majority.

Trustees may look at YRS

DANVILLE — San Ramon Valley School District trustees last night considered appointing another citizens advisory committee for year - round schools, after receiving a suggestion that Twin Creeks parents be asked to served.

The district has had two similar citizens advisory panels in the last six years.

Trustees previously decided not to implement a YRS pilot program for 1978-79.

Twin Creeks, Montevideo, Walt Disney and Green Valley schools had previously been considered.

But parents, particularly those in Twin Creeks, voted against implementation in the coming school year.

Bud Lowery, Twin Creeks principal, had been coordinator of the year - round schools program study.

The board also heard the staff of Del Amigo continuation school recommend a second school be set up and opened by September in the southern section. Del Amigo presently has 136 students.

Representatives of a Twin Creeks parents group were at last night's meeting to present their views

Inch of rain brings total near normal

Nearly an inch of rain yesterday and Sunday brought the Valley closer to seasonal "normal" rainfall but the winds delivering it provided more headaches for utility companies and customers.

Winds over 40 mph toppled six power and telephone poles on May School Road north of Livermore Sunday and deprived 30 PG&E and Pacific Telephone customers of service for about 16 hours. Service was restored about 4 a.m. yesterday, according to PG&E's Al McCarty.

More poles dropped in Pleasanton on Santa Rita Road between Valley and Mohr Avenues and led to a mass power outage of one to three hours almost half the city, he added.

However city work crews were not overwhelmed, largely because earlier storms had marked particular trouble spots and most clogged sewers and vulnerable tree branches were dealt with in January.

Valley rainfall yesterday was .60 inches by 4 p.m. with .22 inches falling Sunday. The 10-year season normal has been 15 inches and the season to date has brought 11.37 inches.

The National Weather Service has forecast scattered showers today with a chance of rain tonight but warns of another storm front off the Northern California coast that will probably bring more rain later in the week.

Study of energy and economy

SACRAMENTO — The effect of state energy policies on California's economy will be discussed today by the Joint Committee on the State's Economy headed by Senator John Holmdahl (D-Castro Valley).

The committee will investigate charges that despite a serious shortage of natural gas there is a "considerable" volume of gas still to be found in California that is not being recovered because of strict governmental controls and depressed prices, Holmdahl said in a press release.

"With the declining supplies of natural gas, utilities and an increasing number of industries are being required to shift to the use of oil as an alternate fuel source," Holmdahl said. "However, federal and state regulations have created a climate of uncertainty about the new facilities that will be needed to process domestic crude oil to acceptable standards.

"Adding to the dimension of the energy problems in California is the restricted availability of water for future electrical generating facilities. The limited space for power plant sites on the coast and restrictions on water usage at inland sites are a growing concern in meeting the forecasted energy demand," said Holmdahl.

ABAG picks Staley

LIVERMORE — Councilman John Staley has been selected by the Association of Bay Area Governments executive board to represent Alameda County on the newly formed Emergency Medical Services Task Force.

The task force is similar in make-up to the one recently released on environmental management plan for the ABAG region.

The Emergency Medical Services Task Force is charged with the development of criteria for the awarding of grants to counties and subregions from federal funds to support emergency medical services. ABAG is the approving agency for these federal funds amounting to several hundred thousand dollars per county.

Staley presently holds the Alameda Mayors Conference appointment to the Alameda-Contra Costa County EMS joint powers agency along with two Alameda and three Contra Costa County supervisors. He has been a member of the agency since its formation.

"The provision of Emergency Medical Service, from the standardization of equipment and training to specialization of services, and provision of paramedic services can only be rationally accomplished on a regional basis," said Staley. "If we want to keep the regulations of these services close to the people, members of the local government must participate actively in the governing bodies. I believe that time spent in these activities is a very important part of the responsibilities of local councilmembers."

Candidate night set

The public is invited to a candidates' night for all Livermore and Pleasanton city council hopefuls Thursday.

Sponsored by the Tri-Valley Republican Assembly, the event will be held at the Vinwood Lodge, 35 Fenton St. in Livermore, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

For more information, call 846-1362 or 443-2053.

To the left

Left turn lanes triumphed over these old trees torn down by construction crews yesterday on Valley Avenue at Santa Rita Road. The intersection project has been often debated in Pleasanton city council meetings and was almost halted several weeks ago. Council member Ken Mercer claimed the medians, signals and left turn lanes might cause more traffic problems in the adjacent shopping areas than they would solve. But Mercer acquiesced after learning the city could lose approximately $20,000 in federal funding for the project if it was delayed. Council will review the project's effectiveness in six months.

Raymond to detail stand on cityhood

DUBLIN — Supervisor Valerie Raymond plans to attend the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) board of directors meeting tonight to clarify her position regarding Dublin's proposed incorporation.

Raymond is supervisor of Alameda County's first district which includes Dublin.

DSRSD directors will convene at 7:30 in DSRSD's general offices, 7051 Dublin Blvd., Dublin.

In a letter to DSRSD directors, Raymond reviewed her position regarding Dublin's proposed incorporation. She also stated she would be willing to attend the next DSRSD director's session which is tonight.

In her letter, she mentioned county supervisors had turned down a Dublin Chamber of Commerce request for $1,000. The chamber proposed to use the money to help compile a study on the feasibility of incorporating Dublin. They also planned to delve into alternatives to incorporation such as annexation to Pleasanton or remaining status quo.

According to Raymond's letter, "County staff and the board (of supervisors) have major concerns about spending the money for an ill-defined study at this time."

She indicated $1,000 spent on a similar study conducted in Castro Valley "in essence was wasted."

Raymond advised it would be best to study alternatives, annexation, remaining unincorporated, plus to consider what impact incorporation would have on DSRSD.

"The Board accordingly agreed with my suggestion to indicate to you the county's willingness and desire to establish a broadly based citizens committee, including representatives from Pleasanton, to examine the issue and to decide how the $1,000 could be most effectively utilized to provide needed information," Raymond continued in her letter.

She stated she and other supervisors were open to suggestions pertaining to this issue.

Other agenda items include consideration of recreation transportation, ratification of Congress of Valley Agencies (COVA) disbandment, a mid-year budget review, hearings from the floor and a consent calendar.

Education

Proficiency test slated

Persons wishing to take the next California High School Proficiency Examination must register by mail not later than Feb. 22, according to the state Department of Education.

The test itself will be held on March 18.

Of the 69,000 persons who have taken the exam since it was first offered in 1975, 39 per cent have passed and received the Certificate of Proficiency, the department said.

The certificate, awarded by the state Board of Education, is equivalent by law to a high school diploma. Persons who are younger than 18 when they pass the exam, however, must have their parent's permission in order to leave school before regular graduation.

Open to all persons 16 or older, including adults, the exam costs $10 and is given only three times per year.

Information bulletins, which include samples of the exam's practical skills-type questions along with an application form and mailing envelope, are available at all high schools and most public library branches, or by writing to High School Exam, Box 100, Berkeley, Calif. 94701.

District lines reset

The minor embroglio caused by proposed revision of three county education board trustee areas will come to a head tonight when the board considers a resolution adopting the revised boundaries.

County Board of Education members convene at 8 p.m. in Room 160 of the county offices, 224 W. Winton Ave., Hayward.

If adopted, the areas of three trustees would be revised. They include Trustee Areas 1, 3 and 7. This includes the boundaries of the Valley representative, Virginia Birdsall of Livermore. The proposed change would slice a small portion from Mrs. Birdsall's area in the East Oakland hill area.

The board is also slated to receive an analysis of the Jarvis-Gann Amendment, to be listed on the ballot in June as Proposition 13, as prepared by the Assembly revenue and taxation committee.

Reading goes Hollywood

DUBLIN — Under the direction of library media aides Wanda Bristow and Janet Lockhart, a "Star Wars" Read-a-Thon was launched Monday morning at Cronin School and highlighted by "visitors from outer space."

The two creatures, a robot called "P2-T2," and a Wooky called "Adnaw," presented the challenging reading program to the students in grades kindergarten through sixth grade in the school library. The library was decorated with stars, planets, robots and computers.

The Read-a-Thon will continue until late May, at which time each child who has participated will blast-off a helium balloon containing a message stating the number of books read in the school during the Read-a-Thon. The helium has been donated to the school by Burt York of York Welding Supply of Dublin.

In addition to reading, points can also be earned by writing science fiction stories, researching science reports, art work, and building space-related projects. All work will be displayed in the library of each pod. Each class will represent a star in the "Ninorc Nilbud Galaxy (figure that one out!), and the "Star Wars" battle is to see which class can accumulate the most power points between now and May.

Campaign costs shocked him

Hasseltine said the generous sprinkling of area developer's names listed as contributors was due to the fact "developers in our community are an active group."

"If they want to support someone they come forward and do so," he added.

Hasseltine said he was "overwhelmed" by the high cost of running his campaign last time plus ongoing expenses. He said he hopes his breakfast club method will continue to be effective.

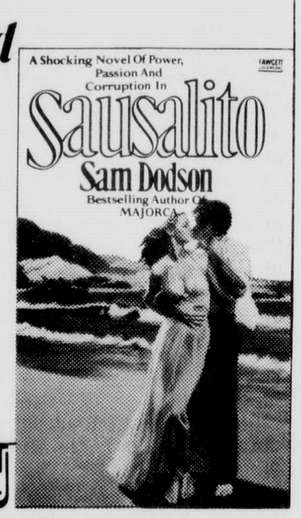

"By June, supervisors up for reelection will have to raise large amounts, too."

THE MIME TOUCHES US

When I think of Marcel Marceau I think of an artist. His art, the art of mime, goes directly to the basic part of our being human. His art is stylized, abstract and surreal.

His characters speak to the hapless character in each of us. BIP, his clown character applying for a job, knocks on many doors. He is elaborate in his movements concerning the details of removing his gloves, taking off his hat, and his feelings of both fear and confidence are expressed in each exaggerated movement.

He auditions with his violin, only to get a firm "No."

Undaunted, he then auditions with a harmonica, going to great artistic lengths with his rendition, only to be turned down for that also.

But then, BIP prepares for a third audition. He opens the piano made of thin air, adjusts the music rack, raises the piano stool for the imaginary accompanist, finds the notes on the keyboard, takes a big breath, an lets out an enormous silent note. But that is enough for the potential employer, who turns him down immediately.

BIP has hurt his arm, and goes knocking on doors holding out his hat for contributions. .. But rows of doors are slammed in his face. Then, it seems his arm has healed because he starts favoring the other arm. Finally he knocks at a door where he is given heavy contributions. He is so overjoyed that he shakes the donor's hand very heartily with his supposedly injured hand. This leads to being beaten by the generous philanthropist.

Marceau awakes as an angel up in the clouds. He gets up and puts his wings on. Then he peeks through the clouds and sees something interesting going on down below. He starts out on a perilous journey, flying down to earth.

A great storm with thunder and lightning comes up, and batters the angel about. He crashes to earth, with a broken wing.

He is finally able to get to a night club, where he hears Latin music.

He goes in, checks his wings, leans against the bar, and starts drinking, obviously enjoying himself very much.

But then he gets a message from up above that that is no way to act, so he leaves the bar, and then he notices a young lady on the dance floor. The angel starts dancing and is seen necking. The angel seems to really enjoy his new-found way of life, and is about to become involved in a torrid love scene, when the clouds part and the thunder and lightning warn him he better get back up there.

The angel seems attracted to lots of turmoil and noise. He drinks recklessly, dances and necks. He starts arguing. He gets into fights and finally ends up in Hell.

Eventually he is seen flying back up to heaven, through the terrific winds and storms. He ends up peeking down through the clouds again.

The Maskmaker was a touching style pantomime in which Marceau keeps changing masks. He has a very sad mask which he puts on, and a very happy, laughing mask. He keeps changing them, the masks being made entirely of expressions on Marceau's face. But the illusion of taking off and putting on masks was complete. Eventually, the happy mask gets stuck on, and the maskmaker tries desperately to remove it. The frantic, panic-stricken situation leads to desperate measures in tryino to remove the smile mask. It eventually leads to death.

The irony of the smiling mask and the downfall of the victim have great impact. It is a masterpiece of creativity and artistry.

BIP, playing David and Goliath, accomplishes the miraculous change from one character to the other with the use of a screen in the middle of the stage. He disappears behind it as the tiny, brave David, and seconds later appears as the gigantic, boastful Goliath.

BIP, the unsuccessful, is no more successful at trying to end it all, as he is at anything else, although he gets mood music on the record player before each attempt. He tries to hang himself, but the rope won't cooperate. When he tries to stab himself, the sword gets stuck in the floor, he closes the windows and turns on the gas, and has a narrow escape, getting the gas turned off, and the windows open just in time. His gun frightens him too much, and the poison he tries to drink turns out to taste delicious.

He goes through elaborate preparations for the Society Party. He kisses all the ladies' hands at the party, one lady impressing him mightily, then he shakes all the gentlemen's hands, sits down to dinner and tries to cut his meat, which keeps flying off his plate and landing on the floor. This scene alone doubtless endears the character to countless thousands who have suffered similar fates. Eventually he gets drunk and leaves, but his hat won't stay on his head.

At the Amusement Park, Marceau finds himself trapped inside the House of Mirrors. The labyrinthine walls are apparent by the physical confines of the character, who, with his hands feels his way along, often bumping his nose against a wall and being thrown back by the impact, as we are all thrown back at times by the impact of the unexpected.

He is the animated doll and the merry-go-round rider who likes the ride at first, but it goes faster and faster, and eventually he gets sick.

What makes the art of Mime enjoyable? What makes it funny? Part of the reason is the skill of illusion in which Marcel Marceau makes us believe, without dialogue, costumes, and with very few props, the unbelievable.

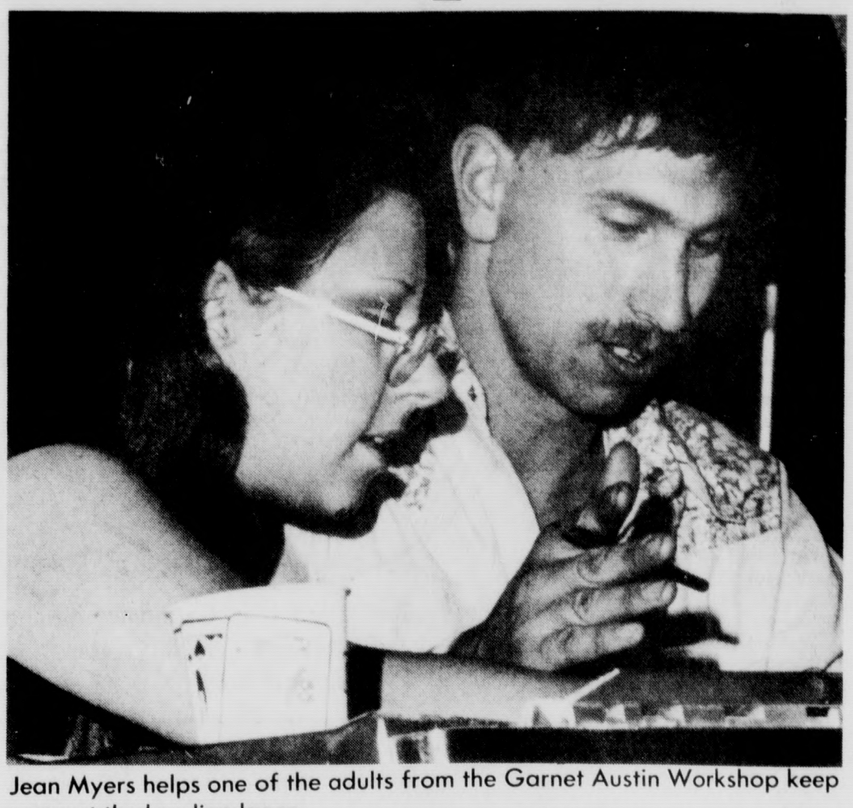

It is entirely by body movement and facial expression that he becomes a certain character, engaging in highly unlikely situations, which at the same time make us laugh because the inept character expresses our own human foibles. And having been found out, we must admit to being human.

Service spotlight

She helps adults help themselves

Jean Myers helps one of the adults from the Garnet Austin Workshop keep score at the bowling lanes.

Jean Myers has been named to the Valley Volunteer Bureau's Service Spotlight for her work at Garnet Austin Workshop for handicapped adults.

Myers volunteers 10 hours each week at the Livermore facility as an aide for recreation and crafts projects. She is currently involved in a table tennis program where the adults are taught to keep score and to get "an idea of how the arm movements feel," she said.

Myers also accompanies a group from the workshop on weekly bowling outings to Granada Bowl, and is active in helping them make puppets for their puppet theater. "I try to stress that puppetry is not just for children, but that it is a well established art form," explained Myers.

She came to work at Garnet Austin after taking a series of occupational tests that showed she is suited for working closely with people. Myers then went over to the Valley Volunteer Bureau to see what they had available. She has been volunteering at the workshop for seven months.

Myers is a student at Chabot College interested in doing work in the field of developmental disabilities.

The are about 25 adults at the workshop who are developmentally disabled. "They are just like anybody else. Different people need different ways to grow and improve, and the workshop is one way to provide ways for them to learn and develop."

Most of the people Myers works with are as old or older than herself, but she has found no problems. "They are very, very nice to work with. When I came to work here I had not been around anyone who was developmentally disabled. But, I was surprised that I felt very, very comfortable."

Two of the individuals she works with are deaf and Myers has no problems communicating with them. She said she didn't known any formal sign language, "but I've picked up a few things — I can communicate on an individual basis."

Because those attending the workshop progress at different rates, Myers said, "It is difficult to find a program that will let everyone achieve the same and feel good about what they are doing."

Myers has yet to receive college credit for her work at Garnet Austin, but she explained, "I want to continue doing this work. I feel my college work and my work here are intertwined. I couldn't gain anything from college without my work here and vice versa."

The 22-year old student said, "I like working with the people here." She added that she enjoys seeing them improve and knowing she has had some part in contributing to their progress.

One curious woman at the workshop wanted to know how music and voices came from a radio. "She thought there were people standing behind the radio," recalled Myers. So Myers arranged for her to visit a local radio station to see where the voices really come from.

Myers said she would like to be flexible to do more things like that. "There are a lot of opportunities that if they (the adults at the workshop) knew about they might choose to participate in."

She would like to act as a resourse for the adults about community activities so that "on their free time they could go by themselves and would not have to be dependent on someone else."

WHY ARE MOST ALLERGIES NOT CURED?

An allergy can be considered as a condition in which the body has a susceptibility to a substance which is harmless in similar amounts to the majority of person. It is estimated that 10% of he population of the United States suffers from some form of allergy.

An allergy can be so severe it is life - threatening or mild enough to be merely irritating.

An allergy can manifest itself as colitis or other digestive disturbance, commonly considered food allergy. The allergy can be manifested in the eyes and nose as hayfever, in the bronchiii as asthma, or anywhere on the skin as a type of skin allergy. A person can suffer from severe, debilitating headaches or rapid heartbeat as the result of allergy.

The major problem in allergy treatment today is that most treatment is symptomatic in nature, designed to gain relief of symptoms. The real answer to an allergic reaction is to find the basic underlying cause which makes the body over - react to normal substances.

The simplistic approach - determining what an individual is allergic to by various testing methods, then eliminating that item from the individual's diet and environment - is similar to deciding to live in a cave as a hermit because you don't get along with people.

Many treatments for symotomatic relief actually make the basic underlying cause of the problem more severe.

Nasal sprays, which are used for decongesting the mucous membranes, work temporarily; however, they themselves irritate the mucous membranes. When the effect wears off it leaves the membranes more irritated, to swell worse the next time. The use of the spray causes an increased need for future medication.

Steroid medications, which are used to supplement the inactive adrenal gland, simply cause a further depletion of the adrenal gland. Long-time use of this therapy makes a patient very resistant, or non - responsive, to natural health care.

If allergies develop, it is important to seek a natural correction of the problem before permanent damage is done by medication.

For more information on allergies call

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm a very open person and when I'm with a man, I like to talk about sex and tel him what I like sexually. My girlfriend says this turns most men off and frightens them to death.

She feels that women should be passive and let the man take over because, she says, this makes men feel macho and secure. She's so sure of this and I must say she seems to have a good relationship with a guy she's known for years so I assume she must be right. Where does this leave me, howver? Am I supposed to sit on all my natural instincts just so the guy will be comfortable. V.P.

DEAR V.P.: Definitely not. Sit on what God provided and speak up abot your feelings. If it upsets your man he'll let you know. But, chances are that if it upsets him he's the wrong fellow for you anyway. Your girlfriend's man apparently is the type who needs a pasive woman in order to feel secure.

According to Princeton's William Kirby, men actually like to talk about sex. Telling a man what pleases you relieves him of some of the tremendous responsibility that's placed on men's backs. Most feel they're supposed to know everything. If they don't it means they're lousy lovers. If the woman tells a man what she wants, it allows him to feel freer knowing that if something is wrong or unpleasant the woman won't suffer in silence, but will tell him about it.

By asking the man what he wants, Dr. Kirby says, the woman sets a model of sensitivity that the man can follow. Any relationship is improved by honesty and trust. The old game of pretend was often destrutive to both partners because it meant that patterns were just repeated even when they were counterproductive.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My girlfriend tells me that I'm "too full of secrets." I see nothing wrong with this but she feels that I wouldn't have so many fears if I could be more open. It's true that I often won't do certain things or go to certain places because I'm afraid something will happen. A lot of my fears are not things I can put my fingers on, but they're there. Even if I thought it would do any good to be more open, how would I go about it? This is not something new. I don't even know when it began and change is difficult for me. O.M.

DEAR O.M. Change is difficult for most people, but in your case I believe you'd feel much freer and less inhibited if you could begin to break your old pattern of secrecy.

Being closed off and hiding different parts of one's life usually comes because of a lack of trust. This is something learned early in life. Our first relationship, obviously, is with our parents. A lack of trust is an indication that something may have gone wrong with this first love affair.

I dont' mean to cast blame on your parents and certainly not on you. I believe most parents don't set out to deliberately to make mistakes or injure their youngster. The important thing is to be able to correct early errors as we grow older.

People who insist on secrecy have such a fear of reject that they refuse to take any risks. To covercome the habit of closing yourself off, you first have to learn to take a chance, to trust the understanding and kindness of other human beings. Once you begin to share, you may be amazed to discover that friends are much more understanding that you imagined. Fear is a lack of trust and I agree that, generally, openness leads to a healthier, happer life.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had a light stroke the first week in September. The doctor said it was a blood clot in the brain. It temporarily paralyzed the left side.

I got over the paralysis, but my balance is not good. The doctor told me to take three aspirin a day. Is this harmful to me?

I have lots of nose bleeds and have heard aspirin can cause nose bleeds. Do you think it does? What do you recommend to prevent blood clots?

DEAR READER — You must tell your doctor at once about your tendency to have nose bleeds. Aspirin is used in treating strokes and after heart attacks because of its action in preventing normal blood clotting. Aspirin in moderate amounts can prolong normal clotting time.

The precautions in using aspirin are about the same as those we have followed in the past for using other anticlotting medicines. I might add here that the effectiveness of aspirin in preventing strokes and heart attacks is still under study and a final answer concerning its usefulness versus any harm it might cause has not been reached. Medicines that are effective in preventing clotting cannot be used or must be used with extreme caution in people who have a tendency to bleed from anywhere, the nose, the stomach, or the kidney as examples. And it is wise to avoid taking even one aspirin for at least a week before any surgery or a delivery.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Regarding your column on zinc tablets, only one druggist out of six that I questioned said he knew where to get zinc sulfate. He tried, but the smallest he could obtain were 220 milligrams and he would need a prescription for any dose that large.

He also said zinc sulfate is used as an emetic. Is that so? Do you know where 66 milligram zinc sulfate tablets may be obtained? Will they make you vomit?

DEAR READER — You have had a problem. If your pharmacist will simply consult the latest edition of the Physician's Desk Reference (PDR 1977) he will find that zinc sulfate tablets containing 66 milligrams of zinc sulfate are manufactured by Mericon Industries of Peoria, Illinois, and that it is a nonprescription item.

Yes, zinc sulfate is an emetic if you take a big dose. The PDR source I mentioned states that if you take nine 220 milligram capsules together it will make you vomit. The usual amount recommended, one of the 66 milligram tablets a day with meals or more frequently if a zinc deficiency is present, is far, far below the emetic dose. Frankly, I am astonished that you have so much trouble since the PDR is a standard reference text.

South's four-club bid was Gerber, which is used by many players to ask for aces in response to a notrump opening. North's four-no-trump response showed three aces (four diamonds would show none, four hearts one and four spades two). South could count 11 sure tricks and really should have bid six notrump, but South wanted to play the hand.

A club lead would have beaten South since both black kings were held by East but West opened a spade.

South had to make a decision at trick one. He came to the conclusion that West would never lead away from a king against a slam and saw that if East held the king of spades he could be sure of his contract.

Then South rose with dummy's ace of spades, played two rounds of trumps; cashed the diamonds and threw East in with that spade king.

East had the choice of two kinds of death. He could give South a ruff and discard or he could lead up to that ace-queen of clubs.

Had North played six notrump he could make it if he knew where all the cards were, but probably would have gone down.

Troubled mat season concludes

Granada High School wrestling coach Steve Page is unsure of which of his grapplers will participate in the East Bay Athletic League championship tournament today. The tournament is scheduled to start at 3 p.m. at Foothill High School.

Five of the ten starting varsity team members were disqualified last week from competition through the remainder of the season because of violations of an 18 - meet limit imposed by the California Interscholastic Federation.

The five were Rob Compton, Rick Quiroz, Bill Freeman, Tom Sherman and Ron Hoeft.

"I can't say who'll be wrestling. I don't know at this point how many are eligible. I just don't know here the situation stands," an angry Page said.

"I don't know what kind of team I'll be putting in there, I can't make predictions," he said.

The otherwise upset coach is confident about his junior varsity squad, though.

"We'll really be able to field the league there. They're undefeated in EBAL," Page said.

One EBAL coach is a little more sure about his lineup and prospects in today's contests.

Amador Valley coach Ron Blanton siad that they've been a tough tournament team all year. The Dons clinched the EBAL title this season with a 7-0 record.

"We'll be there, and so will Livermore. How we do depends on how my questionable guys come through," Blanton explained.

"If my number three and four guys really go for it, we'll do all right," he said.

Blanton said that because of the vacant spaces in the Granada lineup, the finals will more than likely be dominated by Livermore and Amador.

"There's no doubt about it, it should be close," he said.

Livermore coach Ed King predicted that his wrestlers will "do all right, even if Granada's there."

"It's going to be very interesting for sure," he noted.

Blanton and King agreed that a cloase match will be between the Dons' Chris Heredia and the Cowboys' Robert Baird in the 105 - weight division.

"Chris will do all right, I'm sure, but Robby is favored to take it," Blanton admitted.

Steve Potts promises to be a standout for the Dons in the 114-weight class, according to Blanton.

"It's him all the way. Nobody should give him too much trouble," Blanton said.

Since Roy Davis, a top wrestler from Granada, is questionable for today, Blanton is hopeful that will open an opportunity for his 122 - pounder Randy Kendall.

Amador's Mike Larson is undefeated this season in the 140 - weight division.

"He (Larson) will be first seed for sure," Blanton said.

A match in the 147 - division between the 'Pokes' Naish Piazza and Mitch Heredia of Amador will provide a lot of excitement.

"It'll be a tough one either way. They'll be one - two in the finals," Blanton said. "Naish has beaten Mitch once, but if Mitch wrestles the way he can, we'll give them a good match."

Another close battle between the two schools will be in the 165 weight class.

Mike Miller from Amador has beaten evrybody else in the league this season, and Livermore's Dale Hansen has placed well in meets and tournamen tournaments all year, also.

Besides expressing confidence in Dale, King expects Dale's twin brother Darryl to beat the Dons' Chuck Grandon in the 177 - pound challenge.

"He (Hansen) is favored, there's no doubt about it," Blanton conceded.

Topping off, in the 194 weight division, Blanton expects Ernie Zumbach to take it all the way for the Dons.

"He'll get the whole ball of wax. He's unbeaten in league, also," Blanton said.

Livermore and Amador both will forfeit in the heavyweight division.

A meeting was held last night at Foothill High School to reopen the issue of the eligibility of the disqualified Granada grapplers.

Another hearing by the EBAL Board of Governors regarding the same matter is scheduled for this morning.

Ali silent on Spinks fight

LAS VEGAS — Muhammad Aii, who has made work easy for the media for so long, is now making it tough.

The heavyweight champion is giving the press the cold shoulder.

Ali, 36, who will defend his world heavyweight championship for the 20th time Feb. 15 at the Las Vegas Hilton Pavilion against ex-Marine and former Olympic champion Leon Spinks, didn't talk to anyone except his wife Veronica, trainer Angelo Dundee and aide Bernie Yuman at his workout here Monday.

And Ali spoke to them only in hushed tones.

The champion even resisted his normal lecture to the largesized audience. Instead of talking, he shadow-boxed, jumped rope and hit the heavy bag. He didn't spar with either James Ellis or Mike Dokes.

Ali went out running at 3 a.m. Monday while challenger Spinks got in nearly five miles of roadwork at 8 a.m. on a golf course.

The silent act by Ali began Jan. 17 in Miami Beach, Fla., when he refused to speak with reporters at his 36th birthday party.

"Isn't he in great shape?" asked Dundee. "I think he's at 226 pounds now. He's done a lot of roadwork. He came into the gym weighing 245."

Spinks sparred with Joe Gholston and split his sparring partner's lip during the session.

Nolan back in NFL as Saints coach

NEW ORLEANS — Dick Nolan succeeded Hank Stram Monday as coach of the New Orleans Saints — a team that never has had a winning season in its 11 years in the National Football League.

Nolan is the fifth head coach hired by team owner John Mecom Jr. None of Nolan's predecesssors produced better than a 5-9 season.

Nolan, who was head coach for the San Francisco 49ers for eight years, said he was not afraid of taking a team with a losing tradition.

"At San Francisco, when I came there in 1968, they hadn't won in 25 years," he said. He moved to San Francisco from Dallas, where he was defensive coordinator. As a head coach at San Francisco, he compiled a 54-53-5 record and won three division championships. However, after successive losing seasons in 1973 and 1974, he was fired.

He moved to the Saints as an assistant last season.

Mecom said he started with a list of a dozen possible replacements for Stram, talked to five of them, then settled on Nolan — all in 11 days.

Neither Mecom nor Nolan would discuss the terms of the new contract.

Mecom was known to be unhappy with Stram's spending habits, but he said it was failure to produce a winner that led to Stram's firing after two seasons as head coach.

Although Mecom didn't actually say so, he indicated that another reason for his unhappiness with Stram was that Nolan was not made full use of as an assistant. Under Stram, Nolan coached linebackers.

"Dick Nolan was brought in to coordinate the defense," Mecom said. "As time went on, that did not happen. The input was not there, as was the design when he was brought here."

Nolan said his first priority will be to rebuild the Saints' defense, and that he's hoping to do so through the college draft. But he didn't rule out the possibility of making trades — even trades involving established players.

"Any club, if it has the situation where a trade will help the football team, doesn't have anyone on the roster who is untouchable," he said.

NBA all-star MVP

Smith began with spikes

ATLANTA — Randy Smith has come a long way.

An All-American soccer player and track star at Buffalo State, Smith's basketball exploits as a collegian went largely unnoticed. He's always had lighting speed and quick reflexes, but his outside shooting, shaky when he came into the league, has shown steady inprovement.

Two years ago, the 6-foot-3, 180-pound Smith averaged 21.8 points per game and was named to the all-NBA second team. Last year he was 10th in the league in steals, 11th in assists and 20th in scoring while grabbing more rebounds than any other guard in the game. This year, he's seventh in scoring with a 24.5 average and his defense has improved to the point where he ranks fourth in the league in steals.

Smith is proud of being a complete basketball player.

"My game is to run, fill the middle on the break, pass off and sometimes take a couple of jump shots," he said, a sharp contrast to those players around the NBA who shoot first and think second. "I've learned to use my speed, because that's the best thing I have going for me."

Smith's speed and shooting ability proved decisive in Sunday's 28th annual NBA All-Star Game. He scored 14 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter, helping the East rally to a 133- 125 victory and earning Most Valuable Player honors.

"My wife, Terrion, predicted I would win MVP," said Smith, who shot 11 for 14 from the field and also contributed seven rebounds and six assists. "She didn't keep me out too late last night so I had all the rest in the world. I was ready."

Smith, 29, is well aware of the long road he's traveled from low-round draft choice to All-Star MVP.

"I made between $20,000 and $25,000 my first year in the league," he said. "But that's gone up considerably since then. Winning the MPV has got to be my highest achievement in sports. It should give me a lot more recognition than I've been getting.'

Naber Sullivan Award winner

LOS ANGELES — Olympic swimming champion John Naber, an ambassador of goodwill for non-professional athletics, was named Monday as winner of the James E. Sullivan Award as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete.

Naber, 22, won four Olympic gold medals and one silver at Montreal in 1976, but won his 1977 award off his victories for the University of Southern California where he returned for his senior year despite big money offers to turn professional.

"It was a great shock for me to win because my amateur career was over in late April," the gregarious 6-foot-6-inch swimming star said.

He had been runner-up to decathlon champion Bruce Jenner a year ago.

Naber, a backstroke record holder, has been the high-point man in the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships the past four years and won a record 10 NCAA individual titles.

He won with 2,500 points, compared with 1,343 for the runner-up, Edwin Moses, a hurdler from Morehouse College and 626 for diver Cynthia McIngvale of Dallas.

Naber became the 48th recipient of the Sullivan Award, which the AAU lists as honoring the nation's outstanding amateur athlete.

Naber said there was no doubt he would return for his senior year at Southern Cal, explaining, "I made the decision halfway through my freshman year that I would finish there, and I do not regret coming back for my final semester."

Naber thanked his parents, Southern Cal Coach Peter Daland and his Christianity for making the Sullivan Award possible.

"This is the most meaningful award I've ever been voted," he said. "My most thanks go to Mr. and Mrs. Naber.

"Mom got up at 5 a.m. to see that I had hot food before going to practice and Dad had a knowledgeable insight into what makes a championship swimmer," said Naber, who now is a marketing representative at Disneyland, pursuing the public relations career he envisioned even as a champion swimmer.

Both his mother, Joan, and his father, Phillip, were on hand for the presentation ceremony and the latter said, "Neither of us are swimmers. We can stay afloat but we don't go forward."

At the 1977 NCAA championships, Nabor won both the 100- and 200-yard backstroke events in American record time. He also captured both events in the AAU short course nationals in April.

Then he lowered his American records for the 100-and 200- meter backstroke events when his collegiate team toured Japan.

Naber, who said he wants to continue promoting the amateur ideal, said the United States should do well against nations that proselyte their athletes.

"The thrill is in the competition. You do something you have never done before.

Green agrees with odds

HONOLULU — Hubert Green was shooting for his 13th PGA victory in the 13th Hawaiian Open and he got lucky on the 13th hole at Waialae Country Club.

Green, who says he is not superstitious, won the $250,000 tournament Sunday with a par on the second hole of a suddendeath playoff against Bill Kratzert. He sank a seven-foot putt for a four on the hole, No. 16, while Kratzert missed his par putt from five feet.

"I'm not superstitous, but I was aware of the 13s and wasn't sure what it would mean," Green said afterward.

"I think the biggest turning point came on the 13th hole, when I hit a couple of bad shots, but then sunk a 35-foot putt for a birdie. I wasn't sure I deserved it."

Green took the lead in the second round, then held it alone until falling into a tie with Kratzert late in the final round. He had a 71 Sunday, his worst round of the tourney, finishing at 274, 14-under-par over the 7,234-yard, par-72 Waialae course.

Kratzert, who joined the tour less than two years ago, shot a final-round 68, forcing the playoff.

The winning putt made a $21,500 difference for Green, who collected $50,000 for the victory. Kratzert, who won $134,748 last year and is one of the most promising young players on the tour, got $28,500 for finishing second.

Mike Morley, Bob Wynn and Hale Irwin tied for third at 275. Morley shot a closing 66, Wynn a 68 and Irwin a 69.

Gene Littler, the first-round leader with a 65 who stumbled to a 73 on the second day, finished at 276 with a 70 Sunday.

The final two rounds of the tournament were telecast live by ABC Television, with the exception of the playoff holes. The network switched to regular programming after Green and Kratzert finished the 18th hole.

Kratzert has won twice on the tour, taking the Hartford Open last year, and teaming with Woody Blackburn to capture the World National Team Play title.

Green and Kratzert are close friends, and Green said he had to play Jekyll-and-Hyde when the two went into overtime.

"You have to get up a hate for him when you're in a playoff," said Green. "You've got to concentrate enough to get up a grudge."

Match play, grudge or otherwise, isn't exactly his specialty, said Green, who called himself "a bad match play golfer."

Green's experience edge over Kratzert was probably the deciding factor in the playoff. They both hit into bunkers on the final hole, then hit good shots from the sand. But Kratzert, who said he felt the pressure, appeared to hesitate when he took the club back on his putt and missed the cup.

Raiders will open against Patriots

OAKLAND—The New England Patriots will provide the opposition as the Oakland Raiders open their 1978 pre - season home campaign Saturday, August 12th at 6 p.m.

The Raiders will play two of their four 1978 pre - season games at home and the remaining two on the road. One of the road games will be the annual Raiders - 49ers battle, this year scheduled for Candlestick Park.

The New England Patriots finished 9-5 in 1977 and missed winning the championship in the AFC Eastern Division by one game. New England will again be a prime playoff contender in 1978.

The Raiders and Patriots last met in the Oakland Coliseum on December 18, 1976 in the AFC playoff game won by Oakland 24-21 in the final ten seconds of play. The Raiders then continued on in the 1976 playoffs to down the Pittsburgh Steelers for the AFC Championship and the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl XI to win the World Championship.

The Raiders - Patriots rivalry dates back to 1960, first year of the American Football League. The Pats are the only team to hold a series advantage over the Raiders, having won 10 of the 19 league games the two teams have played since 1960.

Holtz is a traveling man

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Lou Holtz is moving at an even faster pace these days than his Arkansas Razorbacks did in sprinting past heavily favored Oklahoma 31-6 in the Orange Bowl.

Holtz covered so much ground over the past weekend that even the original traveling man would have looked like a stay-at-home.

Here's his schedule, calculated to drive any travel agent up the wall:

Left Fayetteville, Ark., Friday morning. Friday afternoon, Cherry Hill, N.J., just outside Philadelphia. Friday night. Columbus, Ohio.

Saturday morning, Atlanta. Saturday afternoon, Boston. Saturday night, New Haven.

Sunday morning, Atlanta, again. Sunday afternoon, back home to Fayetteville to catch up on some urgent recruiting.

Monday afternoon, New Orleans. Monday night, Dover, Del.

Luckily, Holtz has "a friend's jet" at his disposal. Commercial airlines would be hardpressed to keep up with him.

Holtz' schedule brought him to New Haven to accept the Walter Camp Football Foundation's Coach of the Year award for leading Arkansas to an 11-1 record in his first year season as the school's head coach.

"I don't mind the traveling. There are only two things you've got to remember to do — keep breathing and wake up every morning. If you do that, everything else will pass."

Stolen Rolls

ROOSEVELTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Soul singer Bobby Womack has been arrested at the border crossing in this tiny northern New York village, driving what state police said was a stolen Rolls-Royce.

The 30-year-old recording artist pleaded innocent Saturday to a charge of criminal possession of stolen property and was freed on $1,000 bond pending a hearing Feb. 23.

The Rolls-Royce, valued at $30,000, was impounded.

Police said it was stolen in Los Angeles. Womack, of Los Angeles, said he bought it in Phoenix last September.

Police said Womack was traveling from Montreal when he was arrested as he crossed the border from Canada into the United States.

Wait — the drought might not be over

Don't fill those swimming pools yet. A state official has warned if the Bay area doesn't continue to receive the wet stuff, rationing may be back in style in 1979.

There's no reason to panic, however. The present storms have pushed the stubborn high pressure system over the Western Pacific Ocean southward and many local weather forecasters are predicting near-normal rainfall for 1978.

Still, those dry weeks the latter half of January brought back some bad memories and not-so-happy forecasts from others.

"It is not really safe to say (the drought is over) yet," said Bill Clark, spokesman for the state Drought Information Center. "This rain could only be a reprieve."

Those rains, though, have done their job for this year. A recent study by the U.S. Geological Survey shows most streams and reservoirs in California at or above normal capacity.

The Central Valley Project, which partially supplies the East Bay Municipal Utility District which serves San Ramon, has guaranteed its customers 100 percent delivery this year.

So, Clark said, even without another drop of rain residents will continue to receive plenty of water.

The problem, he said, would arise next year.

If the remainder of 1978 is as dry as 1977, Clark said, adding that "it is very likely" Contra Costa County would have some kind of rationing in 1979.

That scenario was recently predicted by a Fresno meteorologist who studied past weather patterns in relation to sea temperatures 800 miles west of Seattle.

Measurements dating back to 1931 of an 8,000-square mile patch of cold water off the Seattle coast show a drop in the water's temperature usually results in a dry late winter and spring for California, Charles G. Markham said.

A December reading of the area registered 48 degrees, Markham said, one degree colder than normal.

In the past this cold sea has been followed by rains only 68 percent of normal, Markham said. He further predicted three to one odds against a normal rainfall here this year.

Many local forecasters, however, tend to disagree with Markham's crystal ball.

Joel Bartlett, Channel 5's meteorologist, and Freedie Meyer, another local weatherman, both said more rain is coming to the Bay area.

And the National Weather Service over the weekend reversed its earlier prediction of less than normal rainfall for February and stated more storms will pass through here in the next 10 days.

Bartlett explained plenty of storms have formed over Siberia and the sub-tropical Pacific and traveled toward Northern California this year.

The Pacific high pressure system (about 100 miles west of Los Angeles), however, has acted like "an invisible mountain of air" and blocked the storms from the Bay area, pushing them into Oregon and Washington.

This high was the reason for the dry last half of January, he added.

"The $64 million question," as Bartlett puts it, is how strong is the Pacific High?"

Bartlett said the pesky high pressure is "not as strong" as it was during the drought, although "it is still stronger than we'd like to see it."

Meyer agreed, saying the system is not the same one that blocked storms and kept the West dry for two years. The high, he added, "is not permanent" this time.

Rainfall in February should be "at least in the normal range" of 3.5 inches for the Bay area and seasonal precipitation through June 30 should top the average 20.6 inches for San Francisco, Meyer added. The recent rains seemed to prove the duo's theory of a not-so-strong high pressure system. The storm track which passed through the Bay area over the weekend knocked the stubborn high down to Baja California. The new positioning, National Weather Service officials said, should allow storms to hit here the next week or so.

Harold Shellum, lead forecaster for the service, however, doesn't find the high that weak.

He said the high is still "very strong" and the low pressure systems in the Pacific Ocean which produce storms have moved farther from California, making them weaker by the time they get here to challenge the high.

He added the jet stream, which plays a role in the positioning of the high, is now "weak and meandering" after being strong during the early January rains.

He said the high will have to stay south of its previous Los Angeles position and the lows will have to move closer for more rain to fall.

For now, the situation looks good, officials at the National Weather Service said. The high has moved and the storms should be traveling through here again.

The best advice, however, might have been given by Bartlett as he prefaced his predictions.

"My personal opinion and that of the American Meterologist Society is that any forecasts beyond five days are of little value," he said.

Maybe the best thing to do is pray.

Big new eastern storm

By The Associated Press

The Northeast braced today for another major snowstorm, expected to be as bad or worse than the one which paralyzed New York and other cities along the East Coast barely two weeks ago.

The Jan. 20 storm was the worst of the decade in New York City and dropped nearly two feet in Boston, setting a record for a 24-hour period.

5¼% CURRENT ANNUAL RATE + ½% CURRENT ANNUAL BONUS

Announcing World Savings' Bonus Account. It offers the best of both Worlds!

Passbook type advantages plus the interest of a certificate.

Do you want the higher interest of a certificate, but feel uncomfortable tying up your money—afraid you'll incur a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal?

Then our Bonus Account can give you the best of both worlds.

The minimum deposit to start your account is $1000 or more. Your account will earn interest at our current annual passbook rate of 5¼% (the highest rate any savings and loan can pay on insured passbook savings).

At the end of 90 days, World will add the bonus to your account at the current annual rate of ½%. That comes to a whopping 5¾% current annual rate after just 90 days!

"5¾% is great! But what if I withdraw funds?"

No problem. You collect your bonus at the end of each quarter. Any money you withdraw since you earned your last bonus still earns our current passbook rate. After your initial 90 day qualifying period, you never earn less than our passbook rate!

"So it goes in quarterly cycles. I can wait for my bonus, or withdraw in between."

Exactly. You'll always qualify for your bonus on funds you leave on deposit for a full calendar quarter. And you can withdraw your funds—without penalty the last 3 working days of each quarter (March, June, September, December).

There are only a couple of restrictions. Federal regulations prohibit payment of any interest on principal withdrawn within the first 90 day period. And while you can open your account for amounts of $1000 or more, additional deposits are not permitted.

If you want the advantages found in passbook savings, plus the higher interest of a certificate, then come to World Savings for a Bonus Account. And get the best of both worlds!
